Case Study details

Client need

Stora Enso required support to deliver a strategic workshop to discuss the development of new nature-related company disclosures including the identification of next steps and potential barriers to action. In addition the team wanted further support to provide updates to relevant team members the final recommendations from the Taskforce for Nature-related Financial Disclosures (TNFD) and to review potential nature-related company disclosures.

The challenge

- Summarising the updates and changes made to the TNFD framework from the draft versions.
- Engaging team members from different divisions to brain storm next steps for nature-related disclosures for the company.
- Summarising the outputs of the supply-chain biodiversity assessment to support nature-related disclosures.

Outputs and results

- ✓ A strategic workshop including a summary of group discussions on next steps and barriers to action.
- ✓ A review of draft nature-related disclosures.

What happened next

Stora Enso are taking the outputs from the strategic workshop forward to determine their next steps for nature-related planning, data collection and disclosures. Stora Enso updated their case study based on the comments provided, and included the final version in their 2023 Annual Report.

 Little Blue Research has provided expertise to our expert team on sustainability and nature, helping us to evaluate and improve our internal processes and to charge them with TNFD components, for us to be able to take the next steps on our journey across the organisation. It was really helpful.”

Kenneth Collander - Head of Environmental Affairs, Group Sustainability, Stora Enso
